

Director's Program Guide

THE INFINITY MAP PRE-NEED COMPLETION PROGRAM

"Because love plans ahead."

HomeTown Ministries International
InfinityMap.org · michael@hometownministries.com

Complete the pre-need. Serve the whole family.

Your pre-need clients have made their arrangements — but their families still face everything else: where the papers are, who to call, what Mom's wishes were beyond the service itself. The Infinity Map closes that gap, and it makes your firm the one that closed it.

The loop, in five steps

Step	What happens
1. Gift	At the close of every pre-need arrangement, your counselor presents the Infinity Map workbook with the customer instruction insert.
2. Complete	The client completes it at home, at their own pace — target: 30 days.
3. Return	The client returns the Funeral Home Copy — ONLY the Personal Information section (all 33 death certificate fields) and the Funeral Wishes section.
4. File	You file those two sections with the pre-need contract. At the time of need, your staff has everything — no interviews with grieving families about birthplaces and Social Security numbers.
5. Certify	You present the Certificate of Completion — a moment families remember, photograph, and tell their friends about.

What your firm gains

- Smoother at-need cases. Death certificate data collected years early, at leisure, verified by the person it describes.
- A warmer close. The gift reframes the end of a pre-need sale from a transaction to an act of care.
- A built-in second touchpoint. The 30-day return gives every client a natural, non-sales reason to hear from you again.
- Referrals. The certificate moment — “everything is in place” — is the kind of story clients repeat.

Your license: your package includes one workbook per client family, up to your tier's count (25, 100, or 250). Provide it digitally or printed. When you're close to your limit, upgrading takes two minutes at InfinityMap.org/funeral-homes.html.

Word-for-word, when it matters

Presenting the gift (at the close of arrangements)

“Before you go — one more thing, and this one is a gift from us. You've just taken care of the arrangements, which is more than most families ever do. This workbook takes care of everything else. It's called The Infinity Map: one book that holds your important information, your medical wishes, where things are kept, and — the part families treasure — your story and your letters to the people you love.

“Take it home and fill it in at your own pace — most folks finish in about a month. Two sections come back to us — your personal information and your service wishes — so that when the day comes, your family signs papers instead of searching for answers. Everything else in the book is private, just for your family. And when you bring those pages back, we'll have something for you.”

The 30-day follow-up call

“Hi [name], this is [counselor] at [funeral home]. No business today — I'm just checking how the Infinity Map is coming along. ... Wonderful. Whenever those two sections are ready, drop them by or mail them, and we'll add them to your file. And if you're stuck on any page, bring it in — we'll finish it together.”

Presenting the certificate

- Fill in the client's name, your firm's name, and the date. Present it in person when the Funeral Home Copy is returned — a frame costs $5 and doubles the moment.
- Say the sentence that makes it land: “As of today, everything is in place.”
- Add the yearly nudge: “Once a year, pull the Map out and update what's changed — and tell us if your wishes change too.”

If a client stalls: most stalls happen at the medical or financial pages. The counselor's line: “Skip anything that's hard right now — return the two sections we file, and finish the rest at your own pace. A Map half-finished is infinitely better than one never started.”

Do right by the family — and by your firm

Privacy rules (train every counselor on these)

- Accept only the two sections. Personal Information and Funeral Wishes. If a client offers the whole workbook, decline warmly: “The rest is for your family — that’s the design.” Your firm should never hold a client’s financial pages, letters, or asset wishes.
- File like a vital record. Store the returned pages with the pre-need contract, under the same safeguards.
- Paper over email. Ask clients to return paper copies or hand-deliver — not email.
- Updates welcome. If a client’s wishes change, they return a fresh Funeral Wishes page; shred the old one.

Compliance notes

- The Infinity Map is a planning workbook — it is not a preneed contract, trust, insurance product, will, or legal document, and it must never be presented as one. It complements your regulated pre-need instruments; it does not replace or modify them.
- Present it as a gift or planning resource included with your services. Nothing in the workbook creates obligations for your firm beyond the wishes you already record.
- Encourage clients to consult their attorney for wills and powers of attorney — a completed Map makes that meeting faster.

Questions directors ask

“Can we give it to at-need families too?” Yes — the Legacy pages (story, letters, wisdom) are a meaningful gift for surviving family members, and each gift uses one license.

“Digital or printed?” Both work. Print and bind for a premium feel (a binder or spiral copy presents beautifully); or hand a card with the download link. Older clients strongly prefer printed.

“Can we put our name on it?” Yes — the Co-Branded Edition adds your firm’s name and logo to the workbook cover and the certificate. One-time setup at InfinityMap.org/funeral-homes.html.

“What if we run out of licenses?” Upgrade any time — the next tier is live within minutes of checkout.

Questions, or want help launching? michael@hometownministries.com — you’ll get a real reply from a real person.